COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course examines the safety, approval, and regulation of products used by the consuming public. It covers the Food and Drug Administration as well as other federal safety programs, using class role play, a field trip to the FDA, interactive classwork and extensive coaching for the graded writing project. Students have the option to submit their class papers for the national prize competition, which several past students have won.

Special Note:
Taking this course satisfies only one of the graduation requirements (seminar or writing). If you take this course and have not yet satisfied the seminar requirement, you will be deemed to have met the seminar requirement. However, if you take this course and you have already met the seminar requirement, you will be deemed to have met the writing requirement. Two, separate courses are required to satisfy both the seminar and writing requirements. No one course satisfies them both.
