COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course will be essential to successful practice in personnel and human resource roles. Practicing personnel related law necessitates close awareness to collective, not just individual, dispute resolution. This class surveys the rights of workers and employers in private and public collective bargaining relationships, including strikes, boycotts, lockouts, contract formation, arbitration, and downsizing issues, using case study, role play with class problem sets, speakers from the federal, state and private sector, and study of statutory and rulemaking requirements.
